

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

affected.—When a person deliberately uses a diction which is not natural and is not chosen simply in order best to convey his meaning, his use of words is affected. This is ordinarily due to prudery, excessive niceness or fastidiousness, undue desire for show, or a desire to support some pretense, as of sympathy, refinement, etc. There are in English various words which are typically so used in some senses, and they are followed in this book by the word “affected,” as where delectation is used for delight, peregrinator for pilgrim, confect for make, emporium for market, limb for leg, awaunt for away, etc.

Common forms of affectation are the excessive use of euphemisms (see EUPHEMISTIC, below) and intensives.

archaic.—Words that belong to the past but have now fallen into disuse in ordinary language, but are for some reason retained in particular uses, as in poetry or for their flavor of archaism, are followed by the term archaic. Archaic uses may survive with particular individuals, as when the word positive is pronounced with the i before the v long (as in pine), or the word oblige is pronounced with the i sounded as ee. Among the very many words archaically used in English are: ghastful for alarming, anhungered for hungry, bestow for apply, host for army, facete for facetious, hostel for inn, inform for deformed, etc.

A word may become obsolete or archaic in general use, but be retained in professional use or in some stock phrase, as let in “without let or hindrance,” hearse or herse for bier in certain ecclesiastical usage. Archaic uses often shade almost insensibly into those that are poetic, learned, or rare.

bookish.—Some words are literary in that they are little used out of books, but still lack any special literary associations aside from the fact that they are rather more formal than ordinary words or that they “smell of the shop.” Terms decidedly of this character are often termed bookish (and are so marked in this book), as horrific for horrible or frightful, tintinnabulum for bell, verve for ardor, horrific for fearful. The use of such words often smacks of preciousness or stiltedness. Of course here, as in all matters of usage, there is no definite line of distinction setting off bookish words as a group from those usually felt to be literary, learned, technical, or pedantic. Cf. TECH., below.

colloq.—Those words are designated as colloq. (that is, colloquial) which are usually and properly common in ordinary speech or conversation, but lack the dignity of association which is necessary to make them appropriate for formal or elevated discourse.

The use of these words in ordinary conversation is not suggestive of vulgarity, but when used in formal or elevated discourse they lend an air of flippancy or illiteracy that is offensive to good taste. Words which have not become recognized as in good usage even to the extent of being colloquial are designated as slang (which see, below). The appropriate use of colloquial words lends a charm and easiness to informal conversation without which it is likely to appear affected, stilted, or pedantic.

A few examples of colloquialisms are: milksop for coward, flit for depart, cabby for cab driver, swing for liberty, ado for fuss.

contextual.—As used in this book the word contextual is used for brevity in place of “a contextual sense or usage.” Very many words depend more or less upon their context or the circumstances of their use for a part of the sense or meaning which they are intended to convey. Thus, when the question is asked, “Have you done your arithmetic?”, we must know the facts with reference to which the question was asked in order to know what done implies, as learned, memorized, or worked the examples of. This dependence of a word upon its context or the circumstances of its use exists, to a greater or less degree, in all cases where a word of more general meaning is used in place of a word of a narrower, or specific, meaning. Thus, whenever we use do in this way, we must in each case look beyond the word itself to know the particular implication which it is intended to have.

An almost unlimited number of contextual synonyms might in this way be given in any dictionary of synonyms, as for example animal under horse, cow, child, man, woman, insect, etc.; emotion under passion, frenzy, love, hatred, joy, happiness, etc.; move under rush, go, dart, run, walk, creep, glide, etc.

I have attempted to avoid uselessly cluttering the pages of the book with an excess of such synonyms, but have added general words as synonyms where it was felt that they would be of service to the user of the book.

Examples of the use of contextual occur on most of the pages, as after ecclesiastic under monk, girl under hussy, product under offspring, mark under brand, etc.

euphemistic.—One often has occasion to express what is in itself unpleasant or is conventionally tabooed in direct expression, by using terms that have less offensive suggestions than would be involved in those precisely or bluntly indicating one's meaning.

The use of euphemisms is a notable feature of primitive races or customs, as where the Greeks designated the avenging Errinnyes by the name Eumenides (a name which arose as a euphemism, and literally means, “the gracious ones”), or where we use intoricated for drunk or bowels or intestines for guts (a word once in polite usage and still proper in some connections). Other words wholly or often used euphemistically are infidelity for adultery, intimacy for illicit amour, departure for death, innocent for simpleton. So any word of pleasant connotation may be used in place of a word of unpleasant suggestion whenever the intended sense will be conveyed.

fig.—When the use of a word in the sense for which it is given involves a consciousness that it is more or less transferred or figurative in use, the word is followed by fig. (for figurative). This has resulted in many words being marked fig. which are not figurative in any sense that would imply that their use belongs to what is rhetorically called figurative, flowery, or ornate discourse; but merely that the sense though established in English usage is not one in which the consciousness of transferred or figurative use is yet entirely forgotten, and without the fig. there might be a momentary difficulty in sensing the connection. This is the case with blaspheme for abuse, whip for abuse, or cosmic for consistent, voice for speaker, day for time.

Proper names conventionally used as synonyms are also designated as fig., where the consciousness of the figure still exists, as where Boanerges is used for speaker, Castalia or Hippocrene for spring, Cyclopean for massive.

formal.—I have designated by formal those words which are characteristic of formal or precise discourse, as where insular is used for island (as an adjective), protasis for beginning, chamber for bedroom. Here again it is difficult to draw the line between those sufficiently formal to be so designated and those which are not, and I have omitted the designation when there seemed to be any question about its correctness.

intensive.—When the intensive force of a word is a noticeable element of its meaning the designation intensive is added after the word. In many cases a prefix is added to a word so as to form a new word, but in an intensified degree. The commonest prefixes so used are be- and en- or em-, as in bedeck, becloud, bespatter, embolden, empoison, enchain; but en- and em- are now little used in new combinations, and be- usually has a suggestion of excess, often with a note of contempt or disgust, as in bedeck, begem, becalm, bespatter, bedraggle. The intensive force is plainly felt in some of the older words, now obsolete or archaic, as in beshrew (thee), bethink (thee), and in many modern forms, such as bedew, enfeeble, empoison, enchase, encarnalize, etc. In many cases the intensive force of the prefix em- or en- is lost and the compound word has become the ordinary term, as embitter (rather than bitter), encircle (rather than circle), emboss (rather than boss). The emphatic form is in some cases so far restricted to poetic use as to justify the denomination poetic.

learned.—Many words are common enough in learned discourse, written or spoken, but are nevertheless quite out of place in ordinary general literature or conversation. Technical terms (here marked as tech.) are essentially of the learned class; but many other words which cannot properly be classed as technical and yet are not generally known to those of ordinary education, are in this work followed by the word "learned." It would be ridiculous to designate as learned all words not understood or which are not at all, or but imperfectly, understood by those with only a grammar-school or even a high-school education, for of these words, many will be more or less familiar to one person and strange to another, who in turn may know well words unfamiliar or unknown to the first. Words of this class are lugubrious, dolorous, matutinal, venial, fallacious, inimical, and these are left unmarked, though at times it is difficult to draw the line between them and those marked affected, learned, or literary.

Those words designated as learned, therefore, are only those about which there seems to be no question and concerning the nature of which a warning should be given to the user of this dictionary. Among them are: indite for compose, mordacious for biting, decollate for behead, autochthonous for native. Learned words are often, like technical terms, more exact in their meanings than more common words.

literary.—Many words are chiefly restricted in use to literary expression notable for its elevation in form or taste or to formal addresses couched in such language, and these are designated as literary. Such words carry a suggestion of studied elegance of expression or of learning that would lend to their use in colloquial or technical discourse an appearance of pedantry, stiltedness, or affectation.

Many or most of these words have once belonged to ordinary diction, but have by a long restricted use been set aside for this more studied or elegant discourse, as burgeon for bud, distract for absent-minded. The setting apart of words in this way is a process continually going on in English. Further common examples of "literary" words are froward for perverse, fruition for enjoyment, imbrue for stain, impugn for attack, Thespian for dramatic, array for dress, decease for die, fuliginous for smoky, infelicitous for unhappy. Cf. FORMAL, above.

obs.—The abbreviation obs. (for obsolete) is put after such words as have fallen into disuse but have seemed notable enough to warrant their inclusion among the synonyms. Since Chaucer's time many thousands of English words have become obsolete, and the presence of even a large part of them would mar a book of English synonyms of to-day. The art of printing has now, as it were, stereotyped our English vocabulary, so that in these days words comparatively seldom become obsolete. Indeed, there is at present rather a tendency, consciously or unconsciously, to retain or revive words already partly or wholly fallen into disuse, as is seen in the large number of words marked archaic.

Therefore, where there has seemed to be some literary or other sufficient reason for including in the book an obsolete word, I have not hesitated to do so, as in case of pleat for braid, pleasant for buffoon, wick for village.

obsolescent.—Where a word has begun to fall into disuse, but still has use enough so that it would be inappropriate to designate it as rare or obsolete, I have added the designation obsolescent. As already said, words do not now so often become obsolete, the influence of the printing-press being to keep in use the vocabulary which we already have. Words that are simply falling into disuse and so are obsolescent (as incommodious for inconvenient, quiz for hoax) are to be distinguished from archaic words which are consciously retained in use or revived for the sake of the flavor of archaism associated with them. Cf. ARCHAIC, above.

rare.—The term rare after a word denotes that the word is rarely used in general literature. Rare words consist mostly of those which now and then appear in literature but have never become common. Thus, fledgy for feathery, affright for fear, desipient for foolish were first used many years ago, but they have never become established in general use. Some words now rare were once common; where the fact of their former frequent occurrence is of notable interest these are usually designated as now rare. Rare words ordinarily are of a more or less learned or pedantic character, and hence their use is often affected to produce a humorous or ironical effect.

rhetorical.—The word rhetorical is used to designate words which are characteristically used in language that is artificially or extravagantly elegant, or that specially seeks to convey an extreme or exaggerated effect, as where mighty is used for big, or mellifluous for melodious, or wroth for angry.

slang.—When a word as a whole, or in the given sense, has a certain arbitrary use, but is considered as generally below the level of educated speech, it is designated as slang.

Slang generally consists of new words or new uses of old words; but this is not necessarily so. Mere newness does not make a word or sense slang, for many of the new words and senses of words in all departments of life, especially in the arts and sciences, are not slang in this sense, though they might come under the very broad sense of slang as equivalent to jargon, or technical terminology (cf. TECH., below). Generally speaking, the use of slang is not only inconsistent with a refined or elegant diction, but also with that seriousness and dignity which is felt to be essential to the general course of conduct and speech.

Occasionally, terms which arise as slang, such as hoax, jitney, and bus, are accepted into good usage, but the great bulk of slang words (such as newlywed for benedict, dope for medicine, claret for blood, buster for blusterer or a big thing) remain slang as long as they are used.

spec.—The word specific (abbreviated in the text to spec.) denotes that a word is a synonym of the title word only in having a specific, or particular and restricted, sense which is included among those for which the title word may be used. Specific senses are at the opposite extreme from words which have such a general meaning that they are denominated contextual (which see, above).

It is noteworthy that the more exact a person becomes in his designation or description, the more specific are the words which he uses. Such words when correctly used conduce to accuracy, but they correspondingly narrow, often belittle, the meaning.

The designation spec., therefore, often serves as a useful or needed warning that a word given as a synonym is so much restricted in its meaning that it is not to be used as a general equivalent of the other; in many other cases this is obvious without the spec., which is then given merely for the sake of uniformity. For examples consult entries on almost any page at random, as depart, horse, perceive, shrine, child, offspring.

tech.—The abbreviation tech. (for technical) is added after words such as pomiform for apple-shaped, ramus for branch, squama for scale, sternum for breastbone, which are chiefly found in, and characteristic of, technical usage. Many, perhaps most, of such words are occasionally to be found outside of technical literature, but their use then nearly always gives an impression of learning or pedantry. Many technical terms are the mere jargon, or slang (in the broad sense), of a trade or profession, and such terms are not ordinarily included in this book.

It is to be noted that technical, as well as learned, terms are ordinarily more specific and exact in meaning than popular words, and are also barren of much or all of the connotations which lend to the commoner words their richness of meaning.

Various characterizations of words other than those given above are used in this book, such as British, U. S., hist. (for historical), antiq. (for antiquarian or antiquities), stilted, etc. Such designations have meanings readily inferred from their ordinary significations, and there is nothing in their relation to general usage or to each other to call for explanation of them here. Thus, the designation British is equivalent to "only or distinctively in British usage"; U. S., to "only or distinctively in use in the United States"; hist., to "used in historical reference or discourse"; antiq., to "used by antiquarians or in reference to antiquities"; stilted, to "characteristically used in stilted discourse."

CROSS REFERENCES

Every cross reference from a word is to some other synonymous word, under which it is given either merely as a synonym or by way of a reciprocal reference at the end. This latter is often done where there are two groups of synonyms of overlapping signification.

The matter in smaller type at the foot of the page consists entirely of cross references, the words in the italic type in each case having, under the main vocabulary entrance, a list of synonyms including the word referred from. Thus, "obloquy: abuse, discredit" means: "see in the main Vocabulary the words abuse and discredit, where the word obloquy will be found as one of the several synonyms of the other words."

DIVIDING NUMBERS

Under many of the vocabulary entries the synonyms are divided into numbered groups, so as to keep together the synonyms for any one sense, because the synonyms of a word in one sense usually differ in whole or in part from the synonyms of the word in a different sense. Where the distinction between the senses is not obvious, I have introduced a brief hint or definition so as to make this plain, as under abridgment, arrangement, ask, v. t., assembly, base, n., beak. Frequently the difference in meaning between the senses is made clear or more obvious by the following antonyms, as under absolute, ask, v. t., branch, body, benefit.
